Upon investigation it was dis engravings in this very number notice- covered that the same individual who has able for fineness of detail for older caused the first excitement had escaped

Taking from his pocket a bible, he flourished it around, pointing with great earnestness to some particular individual down stairs. The police and ushers rushed up after him, and were compelled to force the door in order to again secure him. He was finally taken in charge and forced out of the theater.

Inquiry proved him to be Dr. Terry, who is crazy upon the subject of spiritu aliam, and who was evidently taken with one of his vielent attacks. It took some time to restore order and to quiet the ladies and children, all of whom were terribly excited. Susan B. Anthony Bothers the Men, Miss Susan B. Anthony, in conversa-tion with a reporter of the Chicago Post and Mail, recently, was asked about the truth of the Council Bluffs telegram to the effect that she believed Mr. Beecher guilty. She replied as follows: "That was a malicious falsehood. I never said any such thing, and I'll tell you just how sensational article to that effect, and the reporter for the Associated Press made up a perfect tissue of falsekoods and sent it all over the country. Now, you ain't going to get me to say whether Beecher's guilty or not. In all my journeyings for many months past, I never talked with a man five minutes but what he would ask me that question I tell you, these men are ten times worse gossippers than the women, and are so quizzical and curious. Now, there is no use asking me about Beecher's guilt or my opinion about it, for I den't propose to tell what I think. My opinion on the matter wouldn't be worth anything any way. The women ask questions some times, but the men are the most curious What worries them is to find a woman that knows comething she won't tell and one that refuses to blab out to them all she knows. Saying Disagreeable things.

No class of people can inflict such martyrdom on their associates as those who are given to the habit of reminding others of their failings or peculiarities You are never safe with such a person When you have done your very best to please, and are feeling kindly and pleasantly, out will pop some bitter speech, some underhand stab which you alone comprehend-a sneer which is masked ut too well aimed to be misunderstood Only half a dozen words, spoken merely ecause he is afraid you are too happy or too conceited, and ought to be "taken THE "New Magdalen," by Wilkie Coldown a peg." Yet they are worse than so many blows. How many sleepless nights have such mean attempts caused tender-hearted idiots. How, after them, one awakes with aching eyes and heed, to remember that speech before anything else—that bright, sharp, well aimed nee-dle of a speech that probed the very center of your soul. There is only one comfort to be taken. The repetition of such attacks soon wean your heart from the attacker; and this once done, nothing he can say will ever pain you more. While as for him, one friandship after another, mortally stung by his surcasm, dies, and he finds himself at last alone and friendless—as he deserves to be. Setting aside the unkindness of the habit, and looking at it in an entirely worldly point of view. does not pay to say disagreeable things to those who love us, as our ill-nature will in the end recoil upon our-

"Old Girl"-The Lioness

London Letter. The death of the lioness "Old Girl." so well known to Dublin folks, was attended by a touching incident. When dying old lions are much tormented by rats gnawing their tails. During health they rather welcome the vermin, and lie blinking at them as they friak about the cage, nibbling the bones left from their (the lions') dinner. To prevent this annoyance, a terrier was put into "Old Girl's" cage. At first she growled, but when she saw the dog "fetch" the first rat, toss it up and catch it in professional manner across the back, with one quick, tatal snap, she drew the brave animal to her, licked it and fondled it; and in her shaggy breast it slept every night, with her great protecting paw over it. During the six weeks of the lioness' illness the rats had rather a hard time of it. "Old Girl" had borne fifty-four cubs, and had reared fifty, bringing in by the sale of her progeny £1300 to the gardens. She
